THE TALLAPOOSA.

Her inspection by the President's physicians.

The Tallapoosa, with her new paint, machinery and other adornments, arrived at the Navy Yard yesterday afternoon, having been ordered here suddenly from New York. The impression among those who knew of her arrival last night was that she had been ordered here to carry the President away. She is now moored at the dock between the two ship-booms. This morning the President's official visit of inspection by the President's physicians was made. About 1 o'clock two carriages, containing Drs. Bliss and Hamilton, Secretary of the Navy Hunt, Col. Rockwell, Gen. Swain and Private Secretary Brown drove into the yard and surprised the sleeping crew at the gun. The physicians reached the point where the Tallapoosa lay, the sailors in their white suits were looking lazily about the wharf, and very few persons seemed to be astir on board. A quartermaster on watch saw the party approaching and gave notice to Commander Kellogg, who was forward at the time. The latter in his fatigue uniform met the party at the gangway and pleasantly welcomed them. The first point inspected was the handsome apartment with its swinging berth prepared for the sole accommodation of the President. This, the President's quarters, was expressed at its elegant appointments, but its limited space and generally bad ventilation attracted most attention. The state-room is on the hurricane deck, and is altogether too close for a sick person. It has no ventilation except by a small window, which would create a current directly too sharp for a person in the President's feeble condition to stand. The physicians did not appear at all favorably impressed, but they did not openly express their opinions. From their general conversation, however, it is assumed that they will not consent to sending the President away on that steamer. Other portions of the vessel were visited next, and suggestions were made that if the present quarters were not satisfactory, others could be prepared on the main deck, or even on the hurricane deck, if the physicians declined to say whether they thought well of the suggestions or not, and after being aboard a little more than half an hour, the party re-entered their carriages and drove to the White House.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

What came of Violating an Order on the Navy Yard.

Rather an interesting scene on board the Tallapoosa characterized the visit of the physicians and officials this afternoon. Shortly after their arrival on board, Secretary Hunt's eyes saw some ladies and his sharp eye detected the rustle of their dresses. Turning to Commander Kellogg, with the least perceptible frown, he said: "I see some ladies on board, Commander; are they visitors?"

"No, sir," was the prompt and, perhaps, unlooked reply; "they are my wife and daughter."

"What!" exclaimed the Secretary, with some austerity, arching his eyebrows with surprise.

"Yes, sir, my wife and daughter," Commander Kellogg repeated.

"And here, too, in the face of my recent order, that officers' wives should not remain with them on ship board? I am surprised, Commander, sir, this is a gross violation of the regulations."

All this was said loud enough to be heard on all sides, and while to a certain extent amusing, elicited sympathy for Kellogg from all except the stern Secretary. Commander Kellogg essayed an explanation, but so modestly that it was not generally heard, and then made matters still worse by asking the Secretary and his friends to drink a glass of wine, a custom Secretary Hunt abhors above all others.

Very naturally Secretary Hunt declined, and not many minutes after that he piloted his party ashore and drove away, leaving Commander Kellogg standing on the gang-plank with a very red face and apparently much disconcerted.

NO CHECK

In the President's Progress.

Steadily Holding His Own

Condition Explained by Dr. Bliss.

PULSE AT NOON 100--TEMPERATURE 98.7

This Morning's Bulletin.

The President continues to do well as indicated by this morning's bulletin, which was as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Sept. 2, 8.30 a. m.—The President slept well during the night, and this morning his condition is in all respects as favorable as yesterday at the same hour. Pulse, 100; temperature, 98.4; respiration, 17.

FRANK H. HAMILTON, D. W. BLISS, J. J. WOODWARD, J. K. BARNES, ROBERT REYBURN.

The Bulletin Explained.

There is no cause to grumble at the bulletin this morning. It contains nothing of doubtful import. The President's symptoms are exactly the same as they were yesterday morning, and his general condition fully as favorable. He had a good night's sleep, and feels comparatively refreshed this morning. There is nothing to indicate that he has gained anything. He is merely holding his own, when it was generally expected that every day would show some gain, no matter how slight. The surgeons say he is gaining some, but it does not show in the bulletins. Those conservative documents have never for the past week gone further than to say the President's symptoms are favorable on the day previous, and unless a person remembers these symptoms for several days back it is very difficult to obtain anything like a true conception of the case. There is, however, one thing that seems perfectly clear, and that is that the President is holding his own and not losing anything, which, under the circumstances, must be considered somewhat encouraging. In this view of the case the President is doing well this morning. It is stated by some of the White House people that there is more improvement in the President's condition than is indicated in the bulletin, and that he is better than would be supposed from that.

Mr. Blaine's Dispatch.

Secretary Blaine was evidently encouraged last night, for he sent the following dispatch to Minister Lowell:

"The President continues to do well in his eating and digestion, and his swollen glands are improving, but in the past twenty-four hours he has made no substantial progress in general condition. In the judgment of his physicians, however, he still holds the ground gained on Sunday and Monday last. His pulse and temperature today have shown marked improvement over the readings of yesterday. The weather has been exceedingly warm and sultry, and this may account in part for the adverse changes noted. Even in the September climate of Washington such an oppressive day as this has been rare."

A Car for the President.

An intelligent engineer has suggested to the President's physicians a plan for fitting up a car, in which he can be conveyed to any point without discomfort. It is substantially as follows: Take one of the best railway cars, remove the seats from it, and suspend a bed in the center by four ropes, fastened to the top of the strong spiral springs, and should be firmly bolted to the roof of the car. The springs, if properly proportioned in strength to the weight of the patient and the bed, will so soften all jarring as to make it almost imperceptible. He suggests further that the car be belted with wires of iron, so that the patient may move smoothly and without jumping, and that it be put in the front of the train, with the surgeon's car next, a palace car third, and the engine last. By this arrangement the President's car would escape all the dust and smoke and most of the noise.

The Situation Explained by Dr. Bliss.

Dr. Bliss stated at 10 o'clock this morning that the President continued doing well. There was very little to be said beyond what was stated in the bulletin. That was short, but it told the whole story. The glandular swelling was disappearing, and the President's breakfast this morning was the same as usual, and included beefsteak and beef extract. He was not allowed to swallow the steak, only to chew it and swallow the juice. Dr. Bliss also stated that they were coming to a stage of the case where the improvement would not be exactly uniform; that is, where each succeeding day must not be expected to be just so much better than its predecessor, and where the feverish rise will not necessarily occur at the same hour. In other words, the transitory fever will take its more natural course. The pulse may fluctuate considerably, and other indications may not remain the same, but the conclusion must not be jumped to that the President is worse. Pointing the parotid gland has been discontinued, as it had a tendency to cause sloughing. But and simple cases are now used instead. There are now six openings in the gland, one in the ear, one in the mouth and four incisions. They are all doing their work well and none of them are causing any trouble. The glandular swelling and the consequent incisions will not distort or disfigure the President's face to any extent, and will be effectually concealed when his beard grows out again. One of his eyes was slightly affected at first, the lower lid being drawn down, but that is now remedied.

Slight Improvement Since Morning.

There was no material change in the President's general condition during the forenoon to-day, but the impression of the physicians is that there has been a slight improvement since morning. His appetite continues fair. Since morning he has been eating and drinking more than he has been for some time. It is believed that his food is doing him more good than heretofore and is assimilating better. The gland is reported to be fast disappearing. It is almost entirely cleaned out, and is expected to heal shortly. It no longer causes much pain, though so long as suppuration continues, so long will there be a steady drain on the President's strength. It is thought now, however, that with the increased amount of nourishment, and the

that the President is better able to stand the drain and counteract its effects. The wound is also reported to be in a satisfactory condition this morning. The pus discharge is less sluggish, and there is an improvement in the granulations. No radical change in the wound is looked for until the other complications resulting from the swollen gland are removed.

It is not generally known that oakum forms an important part of the President's bed. Two bags of it were received from the Navy-yard this morning. Oakum is a natural antiseptic and makes a soft, comfortable cushion. That used for the President is specially picked and prepared, and a small portion of it is placed in such a position in the bed that it comes directly under the wound in the back, and next to the dressing. It also acts as an absorbent for all the discharge that may escape through the dressing.

The visitors this morning were few and far between. Secretary Kirkwood, Postmaster-General James and Secretary Windom were the only members of the Cabinet to call. The only other prominent visitors were Hon. Horace Maynard and U. S. Treasurer Gillingham.

Going to School.

Harry and James Garfield, sons of the President, will leave for Williamstown, Mass., on Monday or Tuesday next to enter the freshman class of Williams College. They will be accompanied by B. W. Warren and Don Rockwell, also, by their tutor, Dr. Hawkes. Harry stated this morning that the President seemed well enough to justify their departure on Monday.

The Noonday Bulletin.

The noonday bulletin was as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Sept. 2, 12.30 p. m.—The President's condition has not materially changed since the morning bulletin was issued. Pulse, 100; temperature, 98.7; respiration, 18.

F. H. HAMILTON, D. W. BLISS, J. K. BARNES, J. J. WOODWARD, ROBERT REYBURN.

Better than Yesterday.

The bulletin is of the character known as short and sweet. There has been no change since morning, and the morning bulletin was favorable. His pulse is the same, there is a rise of 3 in his temperature and a rise of 1 point in his respiration. At 12.30 o'clock yesterday the President's pulse was 108, his temperature 98.6° and his respiration 18, showing a less frequent pulse to-day and a rise of 1 in his temperature. Col. Rockwell says the President is stronger and looks better than yesterday.

2 P. M.

The Doctors Satisfied.

Dr. Reyburn was questioned about the President's case about 2 o'clock. He said the gland was doing nicely and the wound looked well. The President had gained a little. He certainly has lost nothing, and nothing for several days and was doing a little better than holding his own. The physicians were satisfied with the progress of the case.

The Contemplated Removal.

The principal topic of conversation at the White House now is the contemplated removal of the President. The question is discussed in all its bearings, and engages the serious consideration of the physicians. All are agreed that the President must have a change of scene before any radical improvement can be looked for in his condition. The only point settled in the matter is that the change will be made as soon as possible. The time, place, and mode of conveyance are still unsettled questions. Each will be determined by force of circumstances. They will be finally considered to-morrow by all the physicians and the members of the Cabinet. It is impossible to state how long before the President can bear removal with safety; also as to where he will be removed. The two plans that come in for the most favor are the trip on the Tallapoosa and the trip by rail to Long Branch. Of the two the latter is the most likely of fulfillment and is said to meet the approbation of a majority of the physicians. Dr. Bliss says there would be no trouble at all in getting the patient to the depot. There would be no necessity for running the car to the White House.

At the depot the President could be placed in a special car that could be provided with all necessary furniture, appliances, etc., and meet the wants of the case, so far as the medical treatment of the patient was concerned, as in his present apartment.

Over the Baltimore and Potomac road by way of Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Trenton. The train could move by easy stages and stop whenever desired, by being run off on a side track. The railroad officials would do all in their power to make the journey safe and comfortable, and would keep the way open. Long Branch is also convenient to the capital, and also to the residences of the consulting physicians.

The President and Mrs. Garfield have also stated their preference in the matter over the other seaside resorts. So it may be stated that while it is still a matter of speculation where the President will be taken, the chances seem to be in favor of Long Branch. The Tallapoosa arrived here yesterday afternoon, and could at once be utilized for the benefit of the President. The safety of a cruise is questioned and the danger of a storm or prolonged rough weather cannot be overestimated. But all may rest assured that no action will be taken in the matter without mature deliberation.

Partly from the White House, consisting of Secretary Hunt, Dr. Bliss, Gen. Swain, Col. Rockwell and Private Secretary Brown, paid a visit to the Navy-yard this afternoon and inspected the Tallapoosa with a view to her possible use. The result of their conclusions will be made known to the conference to-morrow. While there is some doubt as to the President going away on the Tallapoosa, there is none that Secretary Hunt will use her for a cruise of inspection for the Eastern Navy-yards.

2:45 P. M.

Pulse Running Lower Than Yesterday.

The President's pulse is running lower than yesterday, and all conditions remain favorable up to this hour.

Australia Feeding England.

LOSPELO, Sept. 2.—Meat shipments from Australia by the cold-draw process have resulted satisfactorily. Fresh mutton of a large quality which was sold at Smithfield was in excellent condition and brought seven pence per pound. Beef also, almost perfectly preserved, will be sold to-morrow.

John L. Trasle, formerly of Philadelphia, a prominent citizen of Wilkesbarre, Pa., died yesterday, aged 49.

Elijah W. Carpenter, M. D., a much respected physician, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Edwin P. Knowlton, No. 114 Montague street, Brooklyn, yesterday, in the sixty-seventh year of his age.

RUNNING A MUCK.

A Maniac at Large in Chicago—A Naked Man Wounding and Killing by Wholesale.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Henry C. Neal, of Troy, N. Y., ran through the streets here this morning naked, shooting at every one he met, and mortally wounding two and dangerously wounding three other persons. Neal is a young grocer's clerk, and was regarded as a quiet crank. He roomed at No. 363 South Clark street, with Roderick Fagin, a cook.

This morning at 1 o'clock he walked Fagin up with the revolver. He placed a pistol in his wife's hand, and placed a revolver by Fagin's car and fired, the ball entering the brain. He then started down the stairs in his undershirt, caught night watchman Wm. Springfield, threw him around and fired, the ball entering midway between the shoulder blades and passing through the body. Neal fell down the last flight of stairs and was hurt. Bleeding, he rushed into the street, running north, and at the first corner caught Wm. Johnson, colored, and shot him in the breast over the heart, holding the weapon so close as to be heard. He ran up the stairs and into the Rock Island freight depot, and shot Thomas Flynn, flagman, in the neck, and John Wolf, night-clerk, in the breast. He rushed out of the depot, and in turning the corner he ran into Policeman Root. Both men were knocked down by the bullet. Root grappled with the maniac, who succeeded in firing his last shot, emptying the revolver without effect. Root shot him in the neck, and he was captured and sent to the hospital.

FALLING BACK.

The Reverse to the French Army in Africa.

LOSDON, Aug. 2.—The latest from Tunis confirm the reports of a partial reverse to the French army advancing toward Hammanet. The command of Col. Corneil. The army, 12,000 strong, had fallen back to obtain subsistence and to open the line open to a new base of supplies. Col. Corneil's movements had been retarded by efforts to discover whether the natives about Hammanet were friendly or not. The supply trains which he expected failed to arrive, and the army will fall back till they are met. The Arabs, who are present in threatening numbers, and possessed of considerable discipline, are hanging about the army hampering it to such an extent as to make the "falling back" almost a retreat.

Forest Fires and Other Disasters.

OKLAHOMA, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The forest fires which have been raging in McKean and Allegheny Counties for several days past have, in a measure, been checked by the copious rains which fell last night. One hundred men are still on watch for fear they may again break out, as the fire is still smoldering and no rain is now falling. About forty oil rigs were burned and 10,000 barrels of oil destroyed. Several large 25,000 barrel tanks were in imminent danger at one time, but by the labor of 1,000 men, working all day and night, were saved. One thousand wells had shut down for lack of water to run the engines, no rains having fallen until last night for several weeks. The rain of last night will aid them but little, but it is a God-send to the farmers, whose fields were almost barren.

Effect of the Drought in Maryland.

BALTIMORE, MD., Sept. 2.—Reports from all over the State give distressing accounts of the prevailing drought, which has laid up the crops and drying up the streams. A dispatch from Cumberland says: "Canal navigation is virtually suspended, at least for the present, by the low water, only two boats having loaded to-day. Loaded boats cannot go farther than the tunnel, forty miles down the canal."

There have been for several days past about 150 loaded boats strung along the canal, from the tunnel to Dam No. 6, unable to proceed. Yesterday Superintendent Stanhope again adopted the expedient of turning the boats to move their loads, using water from the levels below the tunnel. The plan succeeded, and the blockaded boats were moving to-day.

Elected to Parliament.

LOSDON, Sept. 2.—Lowthorpe, the Conservative candidate who contested North Lincolnshire
